Reynolds DeWalt is so proud of how everyone has worked together along with combining resources with two other companies, Cranberry Print Marketing Partners and Standard Modern producing and donating informational signage, floor graphics, cloth face masks, plastic face shields, distance sticks – emphasizing the importance of distancing awareness, area segregation, drive through testing and best hygiene practices. In our plant as well as the community: South Coast Hospital System, Boston Public Health Commission, Boston Medical Center to name a few....

Our embroidery operators and seamstresses are producing 500 non-sterile face masks per day, and our finishing department are producing 1500 face shields per day which have been donated to the MBTA, local police and fire departments, local businesses, YMCA, and homeless outreach agencies.

As an essential services business, we have been able to continue employment of up to 90% of our staff as well as the companies that we have partnered with to contribute to the community and produce orders for qualified clients.

Thank you to the agile and focused staff with the ability work from home. In addition to the normal daily responsibilities they have completed a full series online training programs to enhance efficiencies during this time of reduced product sales. The reward for this will be realized when businesses return to normal levels and we have better prepared ourselves for the expected surge in business.

On site production staff, are diligent in adhering to strict personal safety new and updated programs, including wearing masks at all times, working six or more feet away from any other person, no more than 4 people in a department/area, continually washing hands, using hand sanitisers, laser temperature taking and recording upon entrance to the buildings. All employees understand and follow company mandated regulations that they return home immediately after work hours to comply to the government mandates stay at home policy.

A special thank you to the 9 individuals dedicated to the work of assuring that all surfaces and more are sanitized day and night through the facilities.

Our remote working staff has been paid at 100% of their compensation, the on site staff are being recognized at 110% of their compensation. Two individuals with compromised health issues have been paid at 80% of their compensation including all benefits covered by the company. All benefits have been covered by the company for the three furloughed employees.

It was a beautiful spring day to show off our new 6-foot distancing sticks. Though funny at first, now it is becoming our new normal.

New floor graphic signage for our employee entrance. The line forms for temperature and PPE checks. The cooperation has been amazing.

Showing off our new mandatory attire that include label stickers reminding everyone, it is safer if we talk 6 feet apart. The ladies are demonstrating how far 6 feet really is.

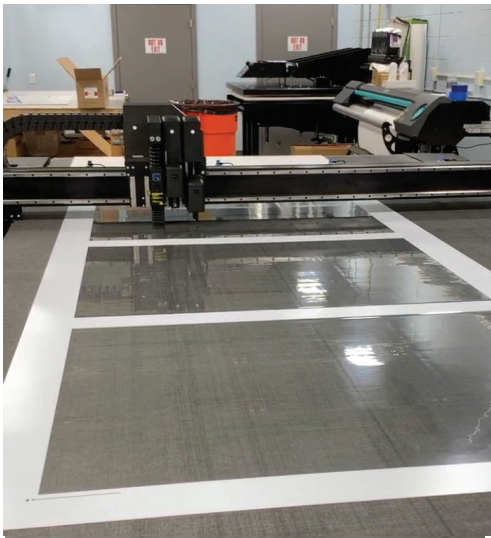

Everyone gets their temperature checked. Even our OFFICE MAX! (I think he thought it was a piece of chicken)

We are proud to serve our healthcare and financial services providers with needed communication to their members, but we must to remember that we need to find ways to work closely without working closely.

The first steps of the face shield manufacturing process. Cutting the shape on the summa cad cutting machine.

Hospital signage, Hospital signage, Hospital signage - changing regulations are making it difficult on our health care providers and staffs. We hope we are helping in some small way.

More evidence that our new normal will change our lives, but it will not define us. We will keep helping the hospitals with directions signage so the public is better informed.

The first of 20,000 face masks to be completed and donated to our first responders and hospitals.

Wallet sized hand sanitizer ordered in November proved to be a major sense of comfort for our staff and customers.

Staff keep these critical supplier badges on them as they travel to work.

Our Team has been designing facial coverings to provide messaging as well as offering a level of protection.

Directional signage is now more than just information; it can save your life.

Utilizing this time to reach out and speak with our clients that we are currently open has provided us the ability to perform a wider range of services that they need such as directional signage and safety outreach messaging for Stop and Shop and Trader Joe's. Although they are current clients, these unfortunate times have given us the ability to demonstrate our expanded capabilities and service offerings, and both of those clients have strongly expressed their desire to increase business with our firm in the future.

We are working diligently to find ways to continue to donate materials to assist the community to adjust and move forward after this devastating situation. Our team and the teams of the other two companies, Standard Modern and Cranberry Print Marketing Partners are committed to this plan, and are working in collaboration to continue in our small way to thank and honor our first responders and unsung heroes now and in the future.

When life hands you lemons – make hand sanitizer!

Our new paper mask is set to go into production on April 5th. The cloth masks are being completed by a team of 5 selfless individuals giving up personal time to sew in the evenings as well as during the day.
